LIVE CAST

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods (“CISG”) will celebrate its 40th anniversary in 2020 (“CISG@40”). It provides a uniform text of law for international sales of goods and currently has 93 Contracting States from diverse legal traditions and levels of economic development, which together represent over two-thirds of the global economy.

To mark CISG@40, this conference will explore the CISG as a tool for global trade from both the theoretical and practical perspectives. Expert speakers will share their insights on the past, present and future contributions of the CISG to the development of international sales law, with a focus on: how the CISG has modernised and harmonised international contract law; how it could simplify the process of international sales of goods by, for example, offering a choice of “neutral” governing law; as well as the recent developments and current trends in CISG jurisprudence.

The conference will also examine the use of the CISG in practice, such as when and how the CISG comes into play in the negotiation and contract formation stages of international sales of goods, how the CISG would affect the drafting of transaction documents as well as the relevant best practice. Particular attention will be given to contract management (including contractual remedies) and the relationship between the CISG and the dispute resolution process in courts and in arbitration.

The conference, co-organised by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, the Department of Justice of the Hong Kong SAR, and the Asian Academy of International Law, will provide a timely opportunity for all involved in cross-boundary sales of goods to share insights and exchange views on the impact of the CISG on global trade.

Topic 1 – Simplification of the Commercial Process for the International Sales of Goods

SPEAKER

Professor Ulrich G. SCHROETER

The speaker will look at how the adoption of the CISG could simplify the process of international sales of goods by, inter alia, offering a choice of a 'neutral' governing law during contract negotiations and providing a flexible and dynamic legal framework for contemporary legal needs in the context of global supply chains. The speaker will also examine how the adoption of the CISG could increase the predictability of the law applicable to those contracts by simplifying the application of conflict of laws rules. In this regard, the approaches taken by courts and arbitrators in deciding whether the CISG applies to a transaction will be discussed.

Topic 2 – CISG - Challenges of the 2020s

SPEAKER

Professor Ingeborg SCHWENZER

Professor Emerita of Private Law, University of Basel, Switzerland

The speaker will analyse key topical issues (and related case law) arising under the CISG concerning, for example, the scope of the CISG (including the applicability of the CISG to services contracts, distribution and framework contracts and e-commerce transactions), the remedies system in the CISG, and the CISG's interaction with national/local laws. In light of this analysis, key trends and developments of the CISG will be discussed.
